TERRIBLE TALE OF SUFFERING AND AGONY TOLD BY THE SEVEN MEN AND ONE WOMAN WHO FINALLY REACHED PORT.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 12.—One of the most gruesome tragedies was told today when the schooner W. S. Fielding reached this port from West Indian waters.

Sailing from Providence on her outward voyage, the Fielding came near a dark sea and striking over the side. Heading up the R. I. they found it to be an overturned boat, with seven men and one woman clinging to it and striving with the little strength that was left in them to hold on to the slippery bottom.

Further attempts to do so were a failure. The clinging men and woman were then rescued and taken to the shore. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore.

The rescue of the crew was a miracle. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore. The rescue of the crew was a miracle. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore.

As the schooner drew near, he saw a ship bottom up, and the bodies of living persons clinging to the capsize. The dark hole of a woman floating over the sea was the last sight he saw before the Fielding was rescued.

THIRTEEN RESCUES.
As the schooner drew near, he saw a ship bottom up, and the bodies of living persons clinging to the capsize. The dark hole of a woman floating over the sea was the last sight he saw before the Fielding was rescued.

Two men and the woman caught the life and held on. They were dragged aboard the Fielding. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore. The rescue of the crew was a miracle. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore.

PEARLY SUFFERINGS.
The rescued persons were in a very serious condition. They had been without food for several days and nights. Their vessel, a small schooner, the name of which Captain King could not ascertain, had been driven to the wreck.

When a day out from Providence, the schooner was driven to the wreck. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore. The rescue of the crew was a miracle. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore.

The first day there was a hot, blinding sun and a heavy sea. Hunger and thirst were the only companions of the rescued persons. They were in a very serious condition. They had been without food for several days and nights.

THEY CAME TO THE RESCUE.
The schooner was driven to the wreck. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore. The rescue of the crew was a miracle. The crew of the Fielding was then rescued and taken to the shore.

On arriving in port Captain King delivered the shipwrecked persons to the authorities. The rescued persons were in a very serious condition. They had been without food for several days and nights.

Consumptives Need No Longer Be Exiled—77 Cases of Consumption Out of 115 Tests Disclosed as Cured—Wonderful Scientific Invention by a St. Louisian.

It would seem that the "White Plague" has at last been conquered, and that all who suffer from the deadly foe of consumption need no longer despair of regaining perfect health. A new method has been discovered, being a resident of St. Louis, the treatment has proved successful in all cases. This means that sufferers will no longer be exiled to the "consumptive colonies" and seek health in more congenial climates.

Of 115 test cases, many of which were advanced tuberculosis, seventy-seven were completely cured, and twenty-three were pronounced as cured. The treatment was given by a resident of St. Louis, the treatment has proved successful in all cases. This means that sufferers will no longer be exiled to the "consumptive colonies" and seek health in more congenial climates.

Government Sees Idaho Stockmen. Moscow, Idaho, Sept. 12.—United States District Attorney Coker has brought suit in the Federal Court against twenty prominent stockmen of southeastern Idaho, who are alleged to have barred large flocks of sheep and bands of cattle from public lands. The suit is for an injunction to prevent the stockmen from interfering with the public supply of that city. State Senator David W. O'Connell is one of the defendants.

DARING BOY MAKES A SENSATIONAL HIGH DIVE.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
New York City, Pa., Sept. 12.—Imitating the high diver, who nightly during the carnival at the Penn. Park athletic grounds leaps from a sixty-foot ladder into a tank of water, Bernard Bruggeman, a 14-year-old son of Sebastian Bruggeman, dived from the topmost part of the Western Maryland Railroad bridge near the York Gas Works, into the Codorus Creek, which it crosses, and then swam to shore unharmed. The daring feat of the youngster was witnessed by a dozen of his playmates and several other persons who happened to be in the vicinity of the bridge at the time.

"Bernie," as he is called by his acquaintances, had seen the exhibition of high diving at the carnival, and being led to whom fear is an unknown thing, he longed, in his boyish way, to imitate the feat. He declared to his companions that he could do it, and offered to prove his assertion if they would follow him. To this they readily assented, but upon going to the carnival grounds the first while diver received a temporary setback. The persons in charge of the high-diving paraphernalia refused to give the boy permission to use the ladder, believing that should he make the dive it would mean his instant death. Nothing daunted, the lad bethought himself of the Market street bridge as a place to demonstrate his prowess to his comrades. Arriving there, his intentions were again thwarted. The construction of the bridge was a drawback this time. To dive from the arch one would have to lean far out in order to clear the footpath. The ladder bridge was then suggested, and the little party moved in that direction. Reaching their destination, Barney proceeded to crawl to the top of the arch while his companions stood in breathless suspense watching his every movement. Having gained the top of the arch the boy surveyed the surroundings for an instant, and then, without even diverting himself of his clothing, shouted: "Here I go, fellows!" and dived into the water. A dis-distance of over fifty feet below, amid the cheering of his boy friends, after coming up he calmly swam ashore as though it was an every-day occurrence. Young Bruggeman is known among his companions as being absolutely fearless, and they attach about as much importance to the feat as though it was only an ordinary jump into the creek, such as they are in the habit of seeing almost every day.
